Market and portfolio review

Global bond markets were extremely volatile over the March Quarter. Bond yields began the year pushing higher, fuelled by optimism over Trump's pro-growth policies. The US 10 year Treasury hit a high of 4.79% on the 14th January before rallying 58 basis points to close the month at 4.21%. This fall in rates was driven by trade policy uncertainty around tariffs which led the market to focus on the negative implications for growth and an increased probability of recession. Manager Janus Henderson in the domestic space PGIM and Brandywine in the global space. No major detractors
