Market and portfolio review

Global growth continued in the fourth quarter, driven largely by continued strength in services activity. Disinflation continued in Western developed economies, albeit more slowly for some countries. The global environment of monetary policy easing continued in the fourth quarter, with many central banks lowering policy rates. Central banks continued their efforts to carefully balance managing inflationary pressures with supporting economic growth. For example, in December, the Bank of Canada decided to lower rates by 50 basis points, marking its fifth consecutive rate cut since June. This move appeared to be a response to the recent rise in unemployment. However, this was arguably a pre-emptive move intended to protect the Canadian economy from the effects of more restrictive immigration policy and potential U.S. tariffs. The U.S. Federal Reserve cut rates by 50 basis points in the fourth quarter, following a 50 basis-point cut in September, but suggested less aggressive easing in 2025 given better-than-expected economic growth and higher-than-expected inflation. Significant political turmoil arose in the fourth quarter, much of it caused by domestic disagreements around fiscal prudence and deficits. There was a "no confidence" vote that ousted French Prime Minister Michel Barnier, which was the result of a showdown over the French budget. French bond yields spiked in response to Barnier's exit as well as dysfunction related to not passing a 2025 budget in time. The German government collapsed last month, precipitated by a budget battle. Canada's long-time finance minister resigned due to disagreements over several issues, including the budget. Adding to geopolitical disruption, the president of South Korea was impeached after a surprise declaration of martial law, which lasted only briefly. The yield curve reversed its inversion, with long rates rising as short-term rates. Global bonds faced headwinds as longer-term yields backed up. Bond yields are still at relatively high levels, and bonds offer attractive opportunities despite tight spreads, especially for longer holding periods. Strong fundamentals underpin many fixed-income assets, which explains tight credit spreads in both investment grade and high-yield credit. Credit risk might be beneficial to take advantage of this resilient and improving growth backdrop. The diversification benefits of bank loans, which tend to exhibit similar volatility to investment grade credit but, offer greater near-return potential due to their high current yield.

Future investment strategy

In 2025, the key question remains whether central banks can steer the world's major economies toward moderate growth while keeping inflation in check. Disinflationary progress will continue, and the global economy is expected to slow in the near term before likely re-accelerating, supported by improving real wage growth and easing monetary policy. The Trust generally gains its investment exposure by investing in a well-diversified portfolio of Australian and international fixed interest managers. The underlying fixed interest investments include a range of international and domestic government bonds, corporate debt and asset backed securities.
