Market and portfolio review

Australian Equities declined in the March quarter. The market rose strongly in January, but then fell sharply from late February after the US announced new tariffs on China, Mexico and Canada. Martin Currie outperformed mostly due to positive stock selection in financials. Alphinity outperformed due to positive stock selection in materials, information technology and energy. Antares underperformed due to negative stock selection in financials, real estate and materials. Quest underperformed mostly due to negative stock selection in financials. Selector underperformed due to negative stock selection materials and from being overweight information technology and consumer discretionary. OC Small Caps underperformed both the Small Ords and the ASX 300. Underperformance vs the ASX 300 was primarily due to negative stock selection in financials and materials which was partially offset by positive AA from being underweight the materials sector

Future investment strategy

There is a very high level of uncertainty as we enter the second quarter of 2025, especially as it relates to tariff policy. Recession and stagflation risks have risen substantially in the first quarter, most notably in the US. Meanwhile, European assets look well-placed to benefit from recent fiscal stimulus despite tariff-induced headwinds.
