Market and portfolio review

Equity markets moved higher over the June quarter as war and inflation fears eased. AI-related stocks drove US shares, while strength in miners supported the Australian market. The S&P/ASX 300 returned 4.1% for the quarter and 2% year-to-date, lagging the MSCI World Index (A$), which gained 13% over the quarter and 5% year-to-date. The key difference was the absence of AI-leveraged stocks on the ASX compared with the US, Korea and Taiwan, where chipmakers and memory stocks drove performance.

Investors are increasingly questioning whether Hyperscalers can justify their extraordinary AI spending and how long markets will tolerate weaker cashflows. The “Magnificent 7” were broadly flat in 2026 as AI costs rose and memory shortages emerged. Market leadership shifted towards AI infrastructure beneficiaries, including memory producers, data-centre developers and industrial AI companies.

Australian market performance masked significant sector rotation. The strongest sectors were Consumer Discretionary (+18%), Technology (+17%) and Real Estate (+11.5%). As June progressed, investors rotated out of commodities, which surrendered part of their earlier gains. Banks also underperformed amid concerns about economic growth, credit risk and the impact of Federal Budget changes on the housing market. Capital instead flowed into Consumer Discretionary, Healthcare and selected Industrials, reflecting a clear preference for previous underperformers.

On the macro front, the RBA delivered a “hawkish hold”, leaving rates unchanged after three hikes while signalling inflation remained too high and further increases were possible. Higher interest rates and Federal Budget measures are already affecting housing, with Sydney price declines accelerating and national dwelling prices recording their largest fall in three and a half years. While markets continue to rally, market leadership has shifted, with AI driving offshore performance and commodities losing momentum domestically.

Future investment strategy

The past financial year delivered no shortage of drama: US tariff escalation and de-escalation; one of the largest resources rotations in decades; an AI surge that triggered a "Saaspocalypse"; conflict with Iran that sparked an energy shock; and at home an inflation spike, rate rises and a significant budget and tax reform that dented consumer confidence and house prices.

If FY26 is anything to go by, FY27 will certainly be different — but probably not calmer.

We saw a re-emergence of positive earnings revisions across the Australian market, driven mainly by the FY26 Resources surge, but FY27 looks set to start on a more precarious footing. Absolute earnings growth is still expected, though revisions are already turning negative across most sectors, with Energy, Resources and the Banks all facing near-term downgrades.

A fragile peace agreement with Iran brought the oil price back to pre-war levels within days. We expected such an unwind to ease inflation and global growth concerns, giving further support to Resources leadership. Instead, hawkish comments from the new Fed Chair drove a stronger US dollar, pushing commodity prices — and the sector — down. Is this the end of the Resources trade? It's the critical question for us, and we suspect not. Second, global demand/supply balances for commodities remains tight, with demand growth underpinned by electrification and the energy transition, and supply growth hampered by permit approvals, grade declines and depletion.

At home more recently, the market has tried to rotate away from Resources into beaten-up names — small caps, healthcare, financials ex-banks, REITs and consumer discretionary — but without earnings support that rotation is likely to be limited in our experience. A PE multiple can re-rate, but earnings need to follow for the move to have staying power. The rotation was reinforced by a more dovish RBA tone, read by some as taking further rate hikes off the table. That may prove right, but the domestic consumer slowdown is gaining pace as three prior rate hikes, the budget and falling house prices weigh on confidence and spending. That's not a good sign for discretionary retail, housing construction or the banks.

In the US, the standout source of economic activity remains the AI-driven data centre boom. Australia offers less direct listed exposure to this theme, though it benefits indirectly through Resources and global data centre builders, and we are now starting to see the emergence of local NeoCloud players.
